THE PURPOSES OF THE COUNCIL

THE COUNCIL puts its emphasis not upon bricks and mortar, nor upon any new form of religious organization. It seeks rather to discover, train and place men and women of exceptional ability and religious spirit who shall teach, counsel, and guide undergraduate students in their life development. It discovers these persons, chiefly recent graduates, by means of a nation-wide search; it gives them full freedom in working out their individual contribution; it aids them in their further training for service as members of faculties, administrators, university pastors, student counselors, and directors of religious activities.

To this end

1. "The Council maintains national fellowships to aid in securing and thoroughly training able graduates of American colleges and universities to teach religion or to render similar service in institutions of higher learning."

In order that this service may be widely effective

2. "The Council seeks to cooperate with faculties of colleges and universities in developing their religious courses or departments of religion, and, when requested, to assist in establishing schools of religion without secretarian bias and representative of the combined religious forces inside and outside the colleges and universities."

The inquiry into undergraduate morale in twenty-four colleges and universities conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research, and shared in by members of the Staff of the National Council has revealed the desire for similar investigations on the part of other institutions. The Council has been requested by a number of administrative officers to make such surveys of actual conditions in their respective student bodies.

Therefore

3. "The Council seeks to assist in or to undertake surveys of moral and religious conditions in institutions of higher learning, and to collect data regarding their religious needs and resources."

The conditions prevailing in our student population reflect and emphasize the moral and religious confusion existing in our American life as a whole.

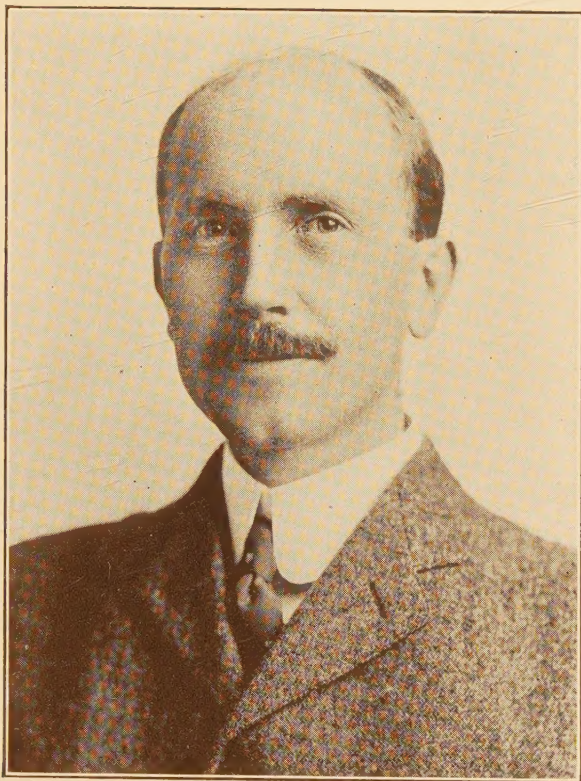

Because of this

4. "The Council seeks to awaken in the American public an appreciation of the importance of religion in the life of individual students, and to promote the fundamental principles underlying religion."

THE FOUNDING AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE COUNCIL

THE COUNCIL owes its foundation to the far-seeing vision of Charles Foster Kent, Woolsey Professor of Biblical Literature at Yale from 1901 to 1925. In the winter of 1921-22, he visited a number of colleges and universities, and in connection with the delivery of lectures made preliminary surveys of conditions relative to the moral and religious life of students. He enlisted the interest and cooperation of many prominent educators and laymen and led in the movement for the incorporation of the Council with the purposes already stated. A Board of Directors and a body of Councillors, elsewhere listed in this book were chosen to put these purposes into effect.

The enthusiasm and unflagging zeal of Professor Kent took him repeatedly to the institutions and cities of the Southern, Eastern and Mid-Western portions of the United States. He established valuable connections with men and women of influence in the field of higher education who caught his vision, rejoiced in his friendship, and continue to give of their time and substance to the cause which he espoused. In spite of his untimely death in May, 1925, the officers and Fellows of the Council have set themselves to a vigorous continuance and development of the program which he outlined. They place their dependence upon the true spirit of science and the true spirit of religion which they believe to be in closest harmony and both alike necessary to the full development of the educational process. They rely upon this happy union to lead to the full discovery of essential truth and the power of truth to verify itself in human life.

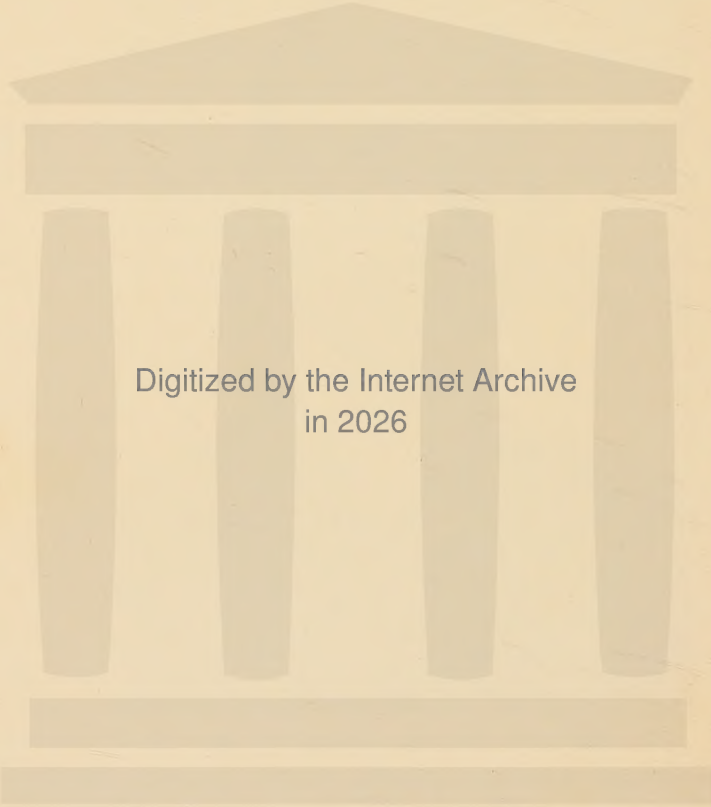

CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D.

Woolsey Professor of Biblical Literature at Yale University 1901-25.

Author of many books upon the Bible and related subjects.

Founder of the National Council on Religion in Higher Education.

In recognition of the important services already being rendered by other agencies and desiring by every means to avoid duplication of effort, the Council limits its work to the four objectives already stated. It establishes no new local organization within colleges and universities but works wholly through administrative officers and established agencies. It sets up no creedal tests, but includes in its personnel men of different religious groups and faiths who work together with sympathetic understanding and mutual appreciation. Upon this broad program the Council seeks to enlist the support of all men of goodwill who desire to see the essential spirit of religion permeate the world of higher education.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

THIS COUNCIL relies upon the effectiveness of continuous personal service rather than upon programs or methods of organization. Although young in years, it has already achieved certain definite results.

1. It has established the National Fellowships in Religion and has appointed sixty-three such Fellows, thirty of whom already occupy positions of responsibility within institutions of higher learning. The others are pursuing their graduate studies, chiefly at Columbia-Union, Yale, Harvard, and the University of Chicago.

2. It has upon invitation aided in the adjustment of courses at these graduate centers, with a view to the more effective training of the Fellows of the Council for the work which lies before them.

3. It has conducted the first three annual conferences of the Fellows of the Council. It has conducted the first "Week-of-Work" for the discussion of teaching plans by Fellows already experienced and those about to begin teaching, under the guidance of mature consultants. The Council has thus brought to bear the united thought and planning of those who in the future will be chiefly responsible for carrying on its work.

4. The officers of the Council have upon invitation of presidents and deans counselled in the development of undergraduate courses, departments, and schools of religion in several colleges and universities.

5. The officers of the Council have, in addition to undertaking independent preliminary surveys of moral and religious conditions, shared in the inquiry into undergraduate morale conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research.

6. The Council has entered into harmonious relationships with other agencies at work upon various phases of the common task and is participating in plans for still further co-operation.

7. The Council has published bulletins describing "Undergraduate Courses in Religion at Tax Supported Colleges and Universities," "Undergraduate Courses in Religion at Denominational and Independent Colleges and Universities of America," and "The State Constitutional, Legislative, and Supreme Court Provisions Relating to Religious Influence in Tax Supported Institutions." These bulletins are distributed free upon application.

8. It has established a placement register of persons trained in the following fields:

- (1) Biblical Literature and the History of Religions
- (2) Philosophy and Psychology of Religion
- (3) Ethics
- (4) Religious Education and Administration
- (5) Educational Administration and Personnel Service

Information regarding such persons is available to Presidents, Deans and others upon request.

9. It is establishing at its office a library of books, articles and other materials dealing with the moral and religious conditions of undergraduate life and their development. This library will be available to research workers.

10. It has enlisted the interest and co-operation of leading citizens in a number of the more important cities of the nation and has inaugurated the plan of state, city, or individual support for its Fellowships.

11. It has helped to stimulate public interest in the function of religion in relation to higher education.

The Board of Directors announces the election of the following to the Board of Directors:

Professor Julius Seeley Bixler of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., the first appointed Fellow of the Council.

President Cyrus Adler of Dropsie College, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College, New York City.

Mr. Henry Hoyt Hilton of Ginn and Company, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. John F. Thompson of New York City.

The Board also announces the election of Mr. George L. Maxwell, Jr. as Field Representative.

"You are undertaking a work in which it requires two whales to make a whale. You must find men and women who are the peers of their faculty colleagues in scholarship and ability, and who are also capable of quickening and guiding the religious life of students."

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON RELIGION IN HIGHER EDUCATION has for the prosecution of its work no endowment or established financial constituency. A portion of its Fellowships have been provided through a grant from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial. The major portion of its funds must come, however, from interested individuals. Those who believe in the work of the Council as a distinctive approach to character education among American students are invited to share in its financial support.
